PATRIOTIC ADDRESS BY R. J. HIGHLAND

After giving a brief history of the formation of the Red Cross, Mr. Highland said in part:

"Perhaps one of the strongest arguments of people who object to the Red Cross and its solicitation of funds is that the care of the army and navy is the duty of the government and, as such, should be financed by the national treasury. In answer to that I want to say that I consider the opportunity to give time and money to the Red Cross the greatest privilege vouchsafed to those of us who are compelled to remain at home. It is the American Red Cross that in future years is going to enable some of us to hold up our heads when we say, 'I was too old or I was too young to stand beside our boys in the trenches of Europe, but I did what I could—I gave my time and my money to the Red Cross.'"

"I hope that there are none of you here in whose minds there may be any doubt as to where your duty lies; but if there is, I want to say to you that it is not only possible, but probable, that had we longer delayed in going to the assistance of the allies, we would have suffered the experience of seeing our own fair land trampled beneath the heel of Prussian militarism and our own people subjected to the unspeakable atrocities of the Hun in Europe. And let me say to you further that if you, and I, and the hundred million other stay-at-homes in this country withhold one whit of the support which we should give to this government, the blood of our soldiers may yet be spilled in vain, and we may yet witness the horrid spectacle of a devil kaiser, with dripping sword, triumphant over the world."

LETTER RECEIVED FROM AVIATION CAMP

Officer James Hayward is in receipt of a letter from his brother, C. S. Hayward, of the 83rd aero squadron, which is located at the aviation camp near Waco, Tex. He says that army life seems to agree with him and that he is taking on weight. He has been made a top sergeant, which is a job that entails considerable work. There are several other Tonopah boys in camp. Stuart says, but he knows only three of them, whom he names in his letter as Bones, Spud Spargo and Peacock. He says:

"It certainly is a wonderful thing fighting in the air. This morning about 7 o'clock two planes came together seventy-five feet in the air, just as they were landing. One of the men was killed."

DEATH OF MOTHER OF D. J. FITZGERALD

A telegram today from Northampton, Massachusetts, brought the sad news to D. J. Fitzgerald that his mother, Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald, died at 5 o'clock this morning. She was aged 83 years this March and was a native of Ireland, but had lived nearly all her life in Northampton. For a year past her health had been failing. There are three other sons besides Mr. Fitzgerald and six daughters living.

RAID PROVED FAILURE.

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 19.—The attempt of an enemy air raid last night was a failure. First reports from outlying parts of London said the gun defense was never more effective than on Monday night. The Germans were engaged hotly. The guns maintained an incessant fire for forty minutes, filling the sky with bursting shells, fragments of which fell to the ground in greater quantities than ever before.

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—A bill providing that farm laborers be given deferred draft classification has been introduced in the house by Representative Flood, chairman of the foreign affairs committee. Those affected would have to be steadily employed in farm work two years before the law became effective.

DEATH OF A TONOPAH HISTORY MAKER

O. A. Turner, who came here in 1901 and made an examination of the original strike in Tonopah, made by Mr. and Mrs. James L. Butler, which is now the property of the Tonopah Mining Company of Nevada, died at Washington, D. C., on February 8. He went there from Kingman, Ariz., where he had been operating for the past several years.

Mr. Turner was sent to Tonopah by John F. Anderson and John W. Woodside of Philadelphia, whose property he was managing at Grass Valley, California. He was directed to make an examination of the strike. After he had examined the property, he had Mr. Butler put a price on it. The sum of $336,000 was soon agreed upon as the purchase price. Mr. Turner tied the property up and wired John F. Anderson his report. Mr. Anderson immediately left Philadelphia and came here. He confirmed Mr. Turner's report and the three went to Sodaville and wired to Mr. Woodside that Mr. Anderson would pay $25,000 if Mr. Woodside would put up a like amount as the first payment. This money was at once placed to Mr. Butler's credit in the Wells-Fargo bank of San Francisco. This was the only payment that had to be advanced out of the pockets of the purchaser, for the remainder was paid out of the royalties from the leases.

TONOPAH IN JUNIOR RED CROSS DRIVE

(Communicated.)

This is the week set aside by the national government for a Junior Red Cross drive, and we are glad to enroll ourselves as in full accord with this splendid movement. It is so new that some of us have felt the need of being educated up to its full benefit, but once convinced, as we are now, we intend to stand behind and root for it so long as the Red Cross banner symbolizes humanitarianism.

We are all familiar with the old phrase: "The school is the cradle of democracy," and in this time, when the whole world is aflame with determination to establish democracy's claim to a right to survive, can we afford to allow so potent a channel as the public schools to be clogged or impeded through a lack of understanding or co-operation? The Junior Red Cross seeks primarily to emphasize democratic principles and to bring them into every study that the school undertakes by a conscious effort to that end on the part of the teacher. It is, therefore, not only the work that can be done by eager and willing little hands in the domestic science and manual training departments, but of every department. It is possible, it is practical, and robs no child of its full interest and benefit in the study at hand. There is no history lesson that is ever given wherein a democratic principle may not be pointed out, if the teacher's mind is consciously bent upon finding it; no geography lesson that does not bear pointedly upon the conditions of today in regard to trade and blood affiliations.

SANITATION, EH?

The grand jury met last evening in special session. It is understood that it had business of very important nature to transact. No report has yet been made to Judge Averill, so the proceedings are secret. A member who was asked by the Bonanza what they did, replied jocularly: "Oh, we discussed sanitation matters."

To show that Mr. Anderson's estimate of the property was a correct one, one need only turn to the files of the Bonanza, where in the second number issued, June 22, 1901, appears the following interview:

"It is not only phenomenal, but the surface showings and the present outlook of the mines is the wonder of the nineteenth century. Before leaving the East," he said, "I could not believe that such ledges, both in richness and size, could exist. I was agreeably surprised to find that the report sent by Mr. Turner to my associates had been found correct in every detail. Had he estimated the group to be worth $5,000,000 he would not have overdone it. The half has not been told of this rich camp. I want to say right here, the mines of Tonopah, with their large permanent ledges, are the richest in the mining West today."

When asked of the company's proposed work, he replied: "The first thing my people will do will be to place you in communication with the outside world by constructing a railroad to your town, which in a short time will become a promising city. The property will be worked on a large scale. Only first-class miners will be employed, of which your state has an abundance."

"The price paid is $336,000—$50,000 down, $100,000 September 30 and $186,000 December 30."

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE BUTLER.

All and a great deal more is promised in today's photoplay, "The Kingdom of Love." It is an absorbing and interesting drama and with a new star, Jewel Carmen, who proved herself to be capable of the most brilliant acting and characterization. This is a play which is not only entertaining, but which leaves a deep impression and a great deal to think about. It is a drama of human life in which a young woman withstands all the temptations that can beset her and keeps her heart and head clear in the midst of iniquity and sordidness of the Klondyke. However, that which can be accomplished through no personal temptation is brought about through the illness of the heroine's mother, from whom she has long been separated. Her salvation comes through the willingness of a young minister to give up everything that was dear to him in order that he might protect her. How this is worked out the wonderfully thrilling scenes that take place during it can only tell. About the personality of the new star, a great deal of interest is naturally centered, and it is sufficient to say that both in matter of beauty and ability she has proven all that was said for her
